What can I do to support my child at home?

When studying Ethics and Philosophy at The Cottesloe School, students are encouraged to embark upon a quest for answers to ultimate questions, such as 'What happens when we die?' and 'Does God exist?'. The main focus of Ethics and Philosophy is to develop the critical thinking skills in our students and facilitate their exploration of not only religion and religious ways of life, but also key moral and ethical dilemmas that may face the world within the 21st century. With this in mind, you can support your child in Ethics and Philosophy by;

- Encouraging them to engage with news stories that are relevant to the subject
- Discussing key ethical dilemmas that are facing the world today, encouraging critical thinking
- Visiting places of worship and sites of religious and historical relevance
- Assisting your child with remembering keywords and concepts (these are available in electronic form from the department)
- Assisting your child in memorising key scripture from sources of authority that they can refer to in their exam
